Research Based Team Building/Teamwork Seminar

This two-hour interactive team building session will take your team to a new level and will include a research-based presentation and activities that will promote deep communication. Team members will learn and practice strategies to assess and up-level individual and collective skills needed to operate a powerful and effective team.

Seminar content will reference and reflect information and strategies from the following publications:

Harvard Review article: “A collection from forty years of research on Teamwork”

Good to Great by Jim Collins, Stanford University

Red Teaming by Bryce G. Hoffman, Financial Journalist

The 5 Dysfunctions of a Team by Patrick Lencioni, founder of The Table Group and business writer

Becoming a Person of Influence by John C. Maxwell

“The Effectiveness of Teamwork Training on Teamwork Behaviors and Team Performance”
